THREAD.....

As 2020 draws to an end, its now a great time to reflect and take stock of what is going on. Not just in our own lives, but across the board. Its been a very unique year, many drastic changes have taken place in most peoples lives. Let's discuss the major events of the year.

Let's rewind to the first part of the year in January. President Trump launched military strikes in Iraq which targetted and killed a well known Iranian general. Oil prices boomed, and a major war (perhaps WW3) Was looming.

Fortunately, this military action was limited and the chaos died down very quickly. Things began to look up again and everything seemed to be going well. Or so it seemed. In late January some concerning news came out of Wuhan, China. A New flu-like virus was on the loose.....

Soon, images and videos of people collapsing on the street, people being stopped at checkpoints, new hospitals being erected to look after the thousands of ill people, struck down with what we now know as "Coronavirus" or "Covid-19" The virus quickly spread across the globe.

Italy quickly became the European epicentre of the pandemic and soon after announced national lockdowns across the country. All non-essential businesses closed and even their highly popular Serie A soccer league was halted to try and stem the spread of the virus.

The rest of Europe followed suit, and in a matter of 1 month or two, the world financial markets collapsed and the oil price even went to a negative price for the first time ever. Millions of peoples lives had been altered in a heartbeat. Working from home or furloughed –

Became the "new normal" As the summer progressed some of the new restrictions were lifted in certain areas, and many people returned to a semi-normal existence.

But Government messages were unclear and often confusing. Things had been changed, and probably not for the better.

Going into the Winter months the confusion increased with ever-changing rules and regulations which began to drive the public to the brink of insanity. But most people, being good people wanted to do the "right thing" and go along with it. The vast majority did.

The massive election in America between Trump and Biden was overshadowed in the run-up to the vote by the pandemic and the widespread protests, riots and demos by certain groups. But the election went ahead regardless and was officially declared for Biden after a bizzare delay.

Trump and his support base were convinced it was stolen and still maintain this view, as it stands Trump is still contesting the result and has not yet conceded. Its been a wild and very strange year.

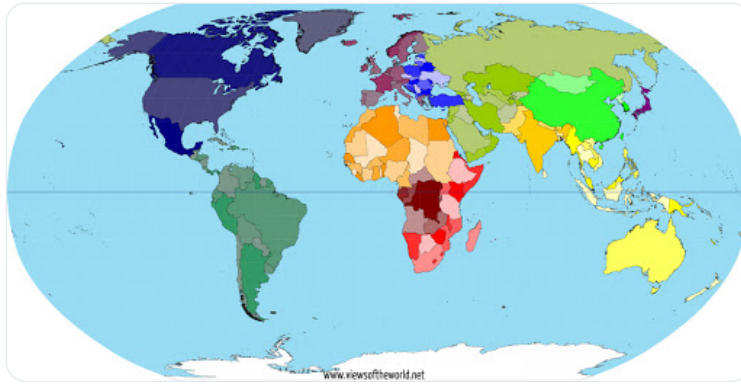

On the backdrop of all this, there have been several stories of UFO/Aliens coming out in the mainstream and alternative media alike. Silver monoliths have been popping up across the globe also which has sparked many interesting and weird debates about the question of alien life.

So it's safe to say, everybody has had a tough year, but it's not been all bad. Many people have reconnected with what really matters in life, spending more time with family and friends away from the clutches of their soul-sucking jobs and careers.

As it comes to a close - the big question is, what does 2021 hold for you as an individual and for the world as a collective? I think we can assume that now - all bets are off and anything is possible - but who is going to project in detail the events of 2021?

Where will the global hot-spots be? Attempted coups? mass protests, riots - even potential infrastructure breakdowns?

What markets are going to excel? Will BTC & other cryptocurrencies continue to boom? or crash and burn in glorious failure?

What will the world look like in 2021? Will we see further restrictions and lockdowns? or will things finally get back to normal like 2019?

How will Brexit affect the UK and the EU as a whole?

Will the powers that be release the truth about non-human entities?

How will the rapid advancement of artificial intelligence impact on our day to day lives and how people work? Is it going to be a good year or more head-scrambling madness?
